WHEELMEN AND THE POLE.

The Chicago Record-Herald has assigned its Washington correspondent, Walter Wellman, to North Pole duty. Mr. Wellman is not without polar experience. He made one dash for the pole several years ago and fell short by some hundreds of miles. Since then he has been cultivating a friendship for Vice-President Fairbanks, a feat which should have insured him to all the hardships that polar weather can bring him.

Pleasantries aside, there are many spectacular features about Mr. Wellman's latest assignment. He has started for Paris, where he will have built, under the inspection of M. Santos-Dumont, an airship in which he will sail from Spitzbergen for the pole. The distance the airship must cover is about 500 miles each way, the longest trip ever attempted in a dirigible balloon.

If all conditions are favorable, we are told that Mr. Wellman will reach the pole in about fifty hours after leaving Spitzbergen. If he does half as well as that, enterprising amusement promoters will be offering personally conducted excursions to the pole for busy men who have only three weeks to spare from their offices. It is not seriously believed, however, that the trip will be accomplished so easily. Mr. Wellman is preparing for all foreseeable contingencies. A description of the airship says:

"It will be 196 feet long and its greatest diameter will be 49 feet. Its surface will measure 23,000 square feet, and its volume will be 116,000 cubic feet. Inflated with hydrogen, it will have a total ascensional force of 15,300 pounds. Seven thousand pounds will be the weight of the ship and its equipment complete, leaving 8,000 pounds for cargo. The ship will be provided with three motors, with a combined energy of seventy-horse power."

Before Mr. Wellman's plan is pronounced hare-brained, foolish and absurd it might be well to wait a little while. It is barely possible that he may succeed where all others have failed. Certainly there is some prospect of victory. Yet if he does succeed he will not have added a mite to the sum of human happiness, he will not have made it possible to grow two blades of grass where but one grew before.
